Donation Will Support Pop-Up Food Pantries Dedicated to Rebuilding Food Access

ROSEMONT, Ill.--(BUSINESS WIRE)-- US Foods Holding Corp. (NYSE: USFD), a leading foodservice distributor, today announced it is donating approximately $250,000 of food to help the Greater Chicago Food Depository, Chicago's food bank, bring pop-up food pantries to communities of color on Chicago's South and West Sides, which have been disproportionately affected by COVID-19, longtime food insecurity and the recent civil unrest.

"In this unprecedented time, we know too many Chicago families are struggling to access fresh, healthy food," said Pietro Satriano, US Foods chairman and CEO. "We're proud to play a part in helping the Food Depository bring additional pop-up food pantries to communities with an urgent need for food."

"We're so immensely grateful for the support from US Foods as we work to expand food access in Black and Brown communities in Chicago that have been devastated by the combination of COVID-19 and food insecurity," said Kate Maehr, executive director and chief executive officer of the Food Depository. "These pop-up food pantries will provide a critical lifeline to the community at a time when the soaring need for food assistance is unlike anything we've ever seen before."

Each pop-up food pantry aims to serve about 1,000 households weekly with boxes of nonperishable food weighing between 20 and 30 pounds, as well as fresh produce and frozen meat. To learn more, visit the Food Depository website here.

In addition to product donations to the Food Depository, US Foods recently announced that it has donated more than $10 million in food and supplies to food banks and charitable organizations across the country since the beginning of March to aid in the response to COVID-19.
